

New England Journal on Criminal and Civil Confinement's
Fall Symposium on

CRIMMIGRATION:

At the Border of Criminal Justice and Deportation

November 5, 2015 • 4:00 – 6:00 p.m.
New England Law | Boston • Cherry Room
154 Stuart Street, Boston, MA 02115

Crimmigration refers to the intersection of two evolving bodies of law: criminal and immigration. This symposium will consider the current challenges faced by crimmigration attorneys and their clients, including the effectiveness of plea negotiations, immigration consequences of subpar criminal representation and the best practices for legal practitioners navigating the crimmigration field. Expert panelists, including defense counsel and representatives of the judicial and legislative branches, will lead a nuanced discussion of working with foreign nationals in this fast-growing area of law.

Featuring a panel discussion with:

- Hon. Robert J. Cordy, Associate Justice of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court
- Juliet Stumpf, Professor of Law at Lewis and Clark Law School
- Aditi Goel, Staff Attorney at Committee for Public Counsel Services
- Halim Moris, Lecturer on Law at New England Law | Boston and Partner at Moris & O'Shea, LLC
- James O'Shea, Partner at Moris & O'Shea, LLC
- Christopher Lasch, Associate Professor, Sturm College of Law, University of Denver

Moderated by:

Dina F. Haynes, Professor of Law at New England Law | Boston